Brad Pitt is one of the hottest actors in Hollywood, with dozens of hit movies to his name. Despite his impressive film looks, Pitt became almost better known for his personal relationships and romantic troubles. Pitt has been married several times, and his long-term relationship with Angelina Jolie has made headlines on a weekly basis. These days, Pitt and Jolie are divorced and working on co-parent of their six children. Despite their past problems, a recent report shows that Jolie and Pitt may be making some progress in terms of their post-divorce dynamic. When did Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie start dating? Angelina Jolie Samir Hussain / WireImage It seems that a long time ago that Pitt and Jolie first crossed paths. It all started in 2004 when they met on the set of Mr and Mrs Smith. At the time, Pitt was married to Jennifer Aniston, while Jolie had just broken up with Billy Bob Thornton. The media went wild over their pairing and rumors immediately began swirling that the two had started the affair. Although Pitt vehemently denied reports of the case, he announced his divorce from Aniston in early 2005, adding fuel to the fire. By the summer of 2005, Pitt and Jolie were seen getting cozy around the world, playing with Jolie's young son, Maddox, and seemingly very close. It certainly seemed as if the two were serious about their new relationship. They adopted a daughter, Zahara, and in January 2006, Jolie confessed that she was pregnant with Pitt's child. As the years passed, Pitt and Jolie expanded their family by welcoming twins and adopting another son named Pax. Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie's controversial divorce from Brad Pitt in August 2014, after nearly a decade together, Pitt and Jolie married in a ceremony with their children. Unfortunately, the marriage did not bring bliss to the couple and only two years later, Jolie filed for divorce. There were rumors that Pitt's alcoholism led to their split. Their divorce dragged on for several years, Pitt and Jolie could not agree on the terms of custody of their six children. Many reports claimed that the divorce caused great tension between Pitt and his children, in addition to anger and resentment between him and his ex-wife. In fact, it seems that Pitt has almost no relationship with his eldest son Maddox. Angelina Jolie is currently impressed with Brad Pitt these days, Pitt is in the midst of a career renaissance and has been making headlines more than ever before - but this time, the headlines are positive. Pitt has made progress in his fight against alcohol addiction, and he has reportedly re-committed to fatherhood and is actively working to restore his troubled relationship with his children. It seems that his new, sober way in life helps him get along better with his ex, Jolie as well. According to a recent report by an American magazine, Pitt and Jolie are place now than they were in years and finally reached the cordial place. The report said that Jolie is on board with Pitt's new relationship with her children and is impressed by Brad's constant sobriety. Things between Brad and Angelina are better than they were, said an insider. They are more heartfelt - they are aimed at resolutions that work for each of them. While the pair are still kept at a distance from each other, it seems they are able to communicate with each other in matters relating to their children - which is a big step for the previously combative couple. It's definitely been a rough few months for Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt. After having to endure the ongoing battle in custody and finally reach an agreement, the relationship of the actors begin to become less strained. They get along better now that they're single after Angelina Jolie filed for divorce from Brad Pitt back in 2016, the ex-husband and wife were immediately not on good terms. As the actors fought for custody of their children in court, their once-loving relationship was nowhere to be found. Instead, it was replaced by upheaval and hatred. While hashing it out in court, many things have been said, and neither Jolie or Pitt had any regrets towards their actions. Angelina offered no concessions about her actions that contributed to the situation, an insider revealed. In December 2018, the former couple finally reached a custody agreement where they will both have legal and physical custody of their six children. Along with the custody agreement, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie can now consider themselves legally single, which has greatly helped their relationship. Sources close to the estranged couple have revealed that their relationship is now the best thing that has been since their split. To the surprise of many of their closest friends, their communication has improved significantly and they are both devoted to co-parenting, the source said. They are dedicated to co-educating their children, although their relationship is much better than it was before, Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt focusing at the moment only on their children. They say that their commitment to co-parenting has eased much of the tension that once existed between them. Pitt and Jolie now have an open conversation when discussing their children and no longer feel the need to fight each other. Their children have a detention schedule and it made a huge difference to the whole family, an insider explained. Schedule has any of the planning pressures Brad and Angelina have faced in the past. Now the children spend time with both parents and are happy and prosperous. Despite the fact that Brad Pitt is happy that he can spend as many with his children as he pleases, he does not talk to his eldest son Maddox. After an altercation with a teenager on a plane back in 2016, the actor accepted that he would probably never be able to rebuild his relationship. In this case, Brad Pitt remains adamant in maintaining a relationship with his five other children. Brad and Angelina are happy with their one life While Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie are still in the middle of their divorce settlement, the two celebrities have only recently become legally single. Jolie even dropped Pitt from her last name and is happy that she is no longer attached to someone. It really helped the former couple's relationship. According to Blast, it was very important for the stars to emotionally break away from each other and start their new life alone, so the documents were quickly tracked down with their private judge We're sure Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt aren't best friends, but now they can get along that many former couples can't tell what they're able to do. Getty Images Update, 9/21: Last night, Jolie's father, actor Jon Voigt, reacted to his daughter's divorce from Brad Pitt. It's very sad. Something very serious had to happen for Angie to make a decision like this,' he told Inside Edition. Although he commented on Jolie and Pitt's separation, he could not confirm the true cause of the divorce. I don't know what it is. It's sad. Pray, he added. I am concerned about Angie and the children and hopefully I will see them very soon. Update, 1:00 p.m.: Angelina Jolie Pitt's longtime manager, Geyer Kosinski, also commented on the couple's divorce. He told E! News: Angelina does what is best in the interests of caring for her children. She appreciates everyone's understanding of their need for privacy at this time. A statement on behalf of Brad Pitt can be found here. Update, 11:15 a.m.: Jolie Pitt Entertainment Attorney Robert Proposal released a statement about the actress' filing for divorce: Angelina filed for divorce. This decision was made for the health of the family. She would not comment and is asking that the family get their privacy at this time. Original post, 10:45 a.m.: Angelina Jolie Pitt has reportedly filed for divorce from Brad Pitt citing irreconcilable differences, according to TIME. The documents say that the date of separation is September 15. Apparently, the reason is Pitt's parenting skills, the news site reports. Jolie, 41, asked the judge for physical custody of her six children together and apparently did not want Pitt, 51, to have joint physical custody, only joint legal custody. She did, however, want give her to the estranged right to visit. The couple married in August 2014 and began dating in 2004. They have six children between the ages of 8 and 15. RIP Brangelina.
